What's this about?

At Urban Empowerment we understand the stresses and hardships of being a college student. When it comes to finances, the transition from your hometown, and the pressure to do well, sometimes it feels like too much. We also understand when it comes to going to church and having a true relationship with God, it can be very trying. With all of the temptation college brings, it may feel like you move further and further away from God. At home you may have went to church every Sunday, and now you barley go to church at all in college. The further away we move from God, we start to find satisfaction in other things, and we start to get caught up in the way the world operates. Maybe you've been seeking more out of life, and a closer relationship with God. It may feel like you've lost yourself in the midst of everything. Your sense of peace has diminished, and it gets harder and harder to make decisions. But God is still here for you, and he hasn't given up on you. This is a new year, Urban Empowerment can help you regain your peace, reclaim your purpose, and rediscover yourself in Christ. If you're ready to make that commitment, we are here to help you. Even if you're not sure you are ready, we are still here to help get ready and would still like you to be involved. College connect is a ministry designed to bridge the gap between college students (or college aged students) and Urban Empowerment Ministries. We know sometimes it is hard for college students to fellowship and connected to a church, and we want to help get you connected! With homework, test, and studying, it can be hard to find the time. However, time for the Kingdom is time very well spent. With College Connect you can use your gifts and talents to serve the Lord, be equipped to take authority of your life, and strengthen your relationship with God.
